Adbusting: Words as political action

on Tue, 4.10. 15 - 17h ASH Room 233

German spoken language, one person offers child care, rooms and toilets accessible by wheelchair (elevator)

Adbusting is a form of street art. It involves altering advertising posters with paint, paper, and paste so that the message is distorted beyond recognition. Whether it's just a changed word or a major intervention in imagery, we show examples of this communication guerrilla practice since 69 AD. We further talk about what advertising actually is, and how advertising depicts social imagination. Why do altered advertising posters have so much social explosive that even the counter-terrorism center deals with it? Together we want to discuss whether this form of action is suitable for an emancipatory practice or whether it merely reproduces the viewing habits of the advertising industry. Neo-Nazi posters, right-wing info stands and racist threats: For years, such incidents have been frequently registered in Marzahn-Hellersdorf. With concrete examples we want to give an insight into the political structures and the work of the local right - from the neo-Nazi scene to actors of national-authoritarian populism. There are many ways to question, but it is not always easy to find out what actually wanted to be found out. But everything started with a "but" or a "mhmm?". The workshop focuses on promoting critical thinking by using writing exercises to introduce how to (scientifically) express and reflect one's own thinking nudges (doubts/questions). Since there will be a lot of thinking involved, the workshop will be balanced with (mutual) head massages and with Buddhist meditative instructions for relaxation. (BIPoC*s only). "The way into the fortress EU" interactive lecture & short film with activists on Tue, 11.10. 7 - 9 pm, Magdalenestr. 19, 10365 Berlin, in the Remise.

German spoken language, children can come along if needed, mezzanine floor premises accessible by wheelchair via an attached elevator, toilets also accessible

With an interactive lecture and a short film, activists from Blindspots (<https://blindspots.support>) will give an insight into the realities of the lives of People on the Move in the Bosnian-Croatian border area and present their work. Afterwards, we want to get into conversation together with soli-drinks and let the evening come to an end. In the Bosnian-Croatian border area, People on the Move have to make countless attempts to cross the border into the EU. Every day, people experience violent pushbacks where they are illegally "pushed back" from Croatia to Bosnia by the Croatian Border Guard and denied the right to apply for asylum. In light of the massive build-up of European border protection, many people are involuntarily forced to remain in the Bosnian border canton of Una-Sana for weeks, months and sometimes years. by Blindspots and RaU (political WLINTA* group)

on Wed, 12.10. 16 - 18 Uhr at ASH Room 114

German spoken language, if needed there will be english whisper translation, children can come along if needed, premises and toilets accessible by wheelchair (elevator).

Discrimination based on class origin and class membership fundamentally defines our society. Classism has an impact even before birth and beyond death. For example, access to education or health care is shaped by it, and even the way we are buried. The workshop will introduce this often forgotten form of discrimination. In addition, we will reflect together on how classism shapes higher education institutions and what we can do about it. - Dr. Francis Seeck, cultural anthropologist*, anti-discrimination trainer* and author* (2022: "Access Denied. No Chance in Class Society: How Classism Promotes Social Inequality") in cooperation with the Anticlassism Department of the ASH Student Council.

Queer, genderfluid, transmasculine, etc.?
An open round on debates and terms of the LGBTIQ+ community on Wed, 12.10. 18:30 - 20:30Uhr at ASH Room 129

German spoken language, if needed there will be english whisper translation, children can come along if needed, rooms and toilets accessible by wheelchair(elevator)

Queer, genderfluid, transmasculine, etc.? A shared knowledge exchange: we all come to this university with different approaches and levels of knowledge. We want to create a space here at KorASH where we talk about queer issues and terms in a considerate and error-friendly way. What is cis, anyway? How do I talk about people who don't use pronouns? What's the deal with neo pronouns? And what do those asterisks actually do? Bring your questions and we will work together to find answers. The workshop is offered by the ASH Queer Department and is intended for all ASH students, especially those who have little access to the queer community. It is not a safe space, but we expect respectful and thoughtful interaction with all participants. We look forward to you and your questions!

Prison Critique - "Incarcerate, Govern, Alienate - The Function of Prisons and Utopias Beyond" on Thu, 10/13 18:30 - max. 21:30 at ASH Room 114.

German spoken language, if needed there will be english whisper translation, one person offers child care in Café Frei_Raum, rooms and toilets accessible by wheelchair, please refrain from wearing woolen clothes on that day.

Prison is a central institution of the justice system, it affects not only prisoners, but all of us. The threat of being locked up makes us think twice before taking what we need to live, before transgressing the rules of those in power. That is since prisons are one of the most blatant expressions of the repressive apparatus of domination anyway. They secure property, exploitation and oppression. Therefore, it is only logical that a large part of those incarcerated are in prison for "property crimes." The argument that prison is necessary to prevent violence is more than questionable. Even the Department of Justice concluded in a study that prison sentences, as opposed to non-incarceration sentences, actually increase the likelihood of committing a violent crime again. So why is a system that tends to worsen the violent conditions in our society such a central and seemingly indispensable institution? We want to discuss this with you and ask ourselves: why are there prisons, what is their function? How are social conditioning, state power maintenance and the idea of incarceration connected? And what are our utopias of a freer society? Workshop by the collective 'ignite!'

AK gegen Rechte Gewalt: Who and what is it and how can I participate? Film screening

On Fri, 14.10. 15 - 17h, the meeting point for the joint walk to Café Interfix is in front of Café Frei_Raum (next to the entrance of ASH) Café Interfix: Stollbergerstr 63, 12627 Berlin

We would like to introduce you to the working group against right-wing violence at ASH to give you an overview of who is working here, what we have already done and what plans we have for the next semester. Afterwards, we would like to discuss with you which topics you are concerned with in relation to right-wing violence and invite you to consider with us how we want to shape the working group against right-wing violence.
